Okavango Delta

INTRODUCTION:

Botswana is one of the few remaining destinations in Africa that still provides a good sense of adventure while on safari. Its expansive game parks and preserves, while offering wildlife as diverse and abundant as that found anywhere else, are still largely undeveloped and untamed. Botswana lies immediately to the north of South Africa. It is bordered on the north and west by Namibia, on the north and east by Zimbabwe, and is connected by a narrow strip of land on the northern border to Zambia. Its territory consists almost entirely of a broad, flat, arid subtropical plateau, though there are hills in the eastern part of the country. In the northwest, the Okavango River empties into the Kalahari sands, creating the largest inland river delta in the world. While the Okavango Delta is home to relatively few large game animals in comparison to other areas of Botswana, its clear waters and myriad small islands are home to an astounding variety of birds, plants, and smaller species of animals. Nearby is Chobe National Park, a beautiful grassland reserve that has gained international fame for its abundant elephant population. Southeast of Chobe are Botswana's enormous Makgadikgadi salt pans, home to large herds of blue wildebeest, several antelope species, and those international lovers of salt pans, flamingos. Almost the entire remaining portion of the country is covered by the Kalahari Desert - a varied environment of sand, savanna, and grassland. Although this area of Botswana is only sparsely inhabited by humans, it is one of the richest wildlife regions in all of Africa. Botswana's two largest parks, the Central Kalahari Game reserve and Gemsbok National Park, are found in this region.

ITINERARY

Day 1: Maun International Airport - Moremi Game Reserve

Upon arrival at the International Airport of Maun a representative will meet you. Once the group is fully assembled we leave Maun and head for Moremi Game Reserve. Most of our day is spent game viewing on the way to and through the reserve, with lunch en route. We arrive in camp late afternoon with enough time to familiarise ourselves with the surroundings and the camp setup and settle into our tents. We will have an excellent dinner in camp, prepared by our ever-cheerful bush chefs and can continue to sit around a roaring camp-fire afterwards or retire to get a good night of sleep in a comfortable bed.

Early morning offers a better opportunity to view predators. We spend the morning on a game drive before returning to camp for brunch. The afternoon can be spent at your own leisure, taking in the surroundings. Late afternoon takes us back out on a game drive in search of new sightings.

We arrive in our new camp late afternoon. A short evening game drive rounds off the day and we again enjoy a delicious dinner.

The Okavango Delta holds an incredible ninety-five percent of the country's total surface water in an inland Delta fed by the mighty Okavango River. Unlike every other major river on the planet, the Okavango never reaches the ocean, but disappears in an endless web of lagoons and lush wetlands. The pristine landscape and diverse wildlife of this unique territory make it one of Africa's prime tourist destinations.

We return to camp for a delicious brunch and enough time in the afternoon to catch up on those postcards. We then venture out again this afternoon for another game drive. Day 5: Moremi Game Reserve - Chobe National Park

Today we drive one of our longest drives. We leave Moremi Game Reserve via the Mababe Sand Ridge and enter the Chobe National Park, stopping for lunch en-route, arriving at our new camp in Savute in the late afternoon. Savute is a well-documented area where National Geographic has filmed a large amount of films and programs. Our staff will already have set up the new camp and have dinner cooking.

The Chobe National Park sprawls across 11 700 square km of open grassland, Mopani forests and acacia scrub. The Chobe was once a veritable crossroads for traders and explorers. The indomitable David Livingstone travelled through the Savute marsh in 1851, which he referred to as a "dismal swamp". The marsh was formed by the Savute channel, a watercourse that once flowed out of the Linyanti, but dried up in the 1980s. Today the Savute swamp is dry grassland while the channel is a dry fissure carved in the earth.

Day 6: Chobe National Park

We rise early this morning and go in search of the movie stars of Africa. Savute has no permanent water, except that of underground water that is pumped into waterholes scattered throughout the park. At certain times of the year when there is no natural water in catchment areas these waterholes teem with wildlife and we can expect to see up to fifty bull elephants queuing to drink. We return to camp for lunch and have some time to relax before venturing out again in the late afternoon. We return to camp in time for dinner and refreshments around the campfire.

Today we leave the dry area of Savute and head north to the perennial Chobe River. This riverfront is well known for its abundance of breeding herds of elephant and buffalo, as well as attracting all other game in search of water.

We have lunch en route and a short game drive along the Chobe River in search of animals, before returning to camp for dinner.

The Chobe Riverfront covers a stretch of only 15km, but nevertheless constitutes the most popular part of the park and the well-developed road network allows high volumes of visitors to view the even higher concentrations of game. The Chobe River becomes a vital water supply in the dry season, attracting large herds of elephant and buffalo along its banks. The elephant population is legendary, swelling to over 50 000 equivalent to more than five per square kilometre – a density three times higher than the human population!
